RICH MAN'S SON HELD IN MURDER OF CHICAGO LAD

Student Son of Millionaire Is Held in Connection With Franks Lad's Death

SPECTACLES CLUE

Student Admits Eye Glasses May Be His; Visited Spot Where Lad Was Found

(By the Associated Press)

CHICAGO, May 30.—Nathan E. Leopold, 19 year old student and son of a millionaire manufacturer, questioned for hours early today, said he believed the spectacles found near the spot where the body of Robert Franks, 13 year old son of a millionaire, kidnapped May 12, was found, were his and that he lost them while on a bird study expedition. The body was found in a railroad culvert and the glasses were found some distance away.

"I don't blame the police for holding me," Leopold said. "I was out near the culvert on Saturday and Sunday before the body was found and it is quite probable I lost my glasses out there."

CHICAGO, May 30.—Nathan E. Leopold, Jr., nineteen year old son of a millionaire box manufacturer, university honor student and connected with some of Chicago's wealthiest families, was questioned all night by Robert E. Crowe, state attorney, after an optical company's records revealed that he had been sold a pair of spectacles identical with those found near the body of Robert Franks, 13 year old kidnapper's victim.

Early today when questioning was suspended until one p. m. young Leopold still maintained that he was not the owner of the spectacles, although he was familiar with the terrain of the wild country on the far south side where the body was found a week ago and had visited the spot as recently as a few days before the Franks boy's nude body was found jammed in a railroad culvert between two lakes.

The youth explained that he had visited the scene possibly fifty times with classes and companions interested in ornithology.

A score or more persons have been arrested since Franks, also the son of a multi-millionaire, was killed, but Mr. Crowe and the detectives have it plain that they place their chief reliance upon finding the owner of the glasses. Toward that end hundreds of opticians and their clerks have been examining records.

Fifty Detectives Busy.

Early today fifty detectives were ordered to visit fraternity houses and homes of wealthy residents of the university circle to take into custody for questioning twenty-five or thirty chums of young Leopold. It was understood they would be asked how frequently the youth had worn the spectacles and when he last was seen wearing them.

Young Leopold said he was a law student and a member of an honor society. He boasted that he is familiar with fifteen languages and that he made a particular study of ornithology.

He was quoted as having said that he also had made a study of the irregularities of human nature and that he had intended to make a free translation of the writings of the sixteenth Italians for dissemination among his friends, but that university professors dissuaded him.

The theory that the Franks boy was the victim of others than kidnappers interested in the demanded ransom and was killed accidentally still is held by some detectives working on the case.

Three women and a man were taken in an apartment last night by detectives who found a small portable typewriter and a quantity of paper similar to that on which the ransom demand was written.

ALLIES INTEND TO KEEP FIRM HOLD ON GERMANY

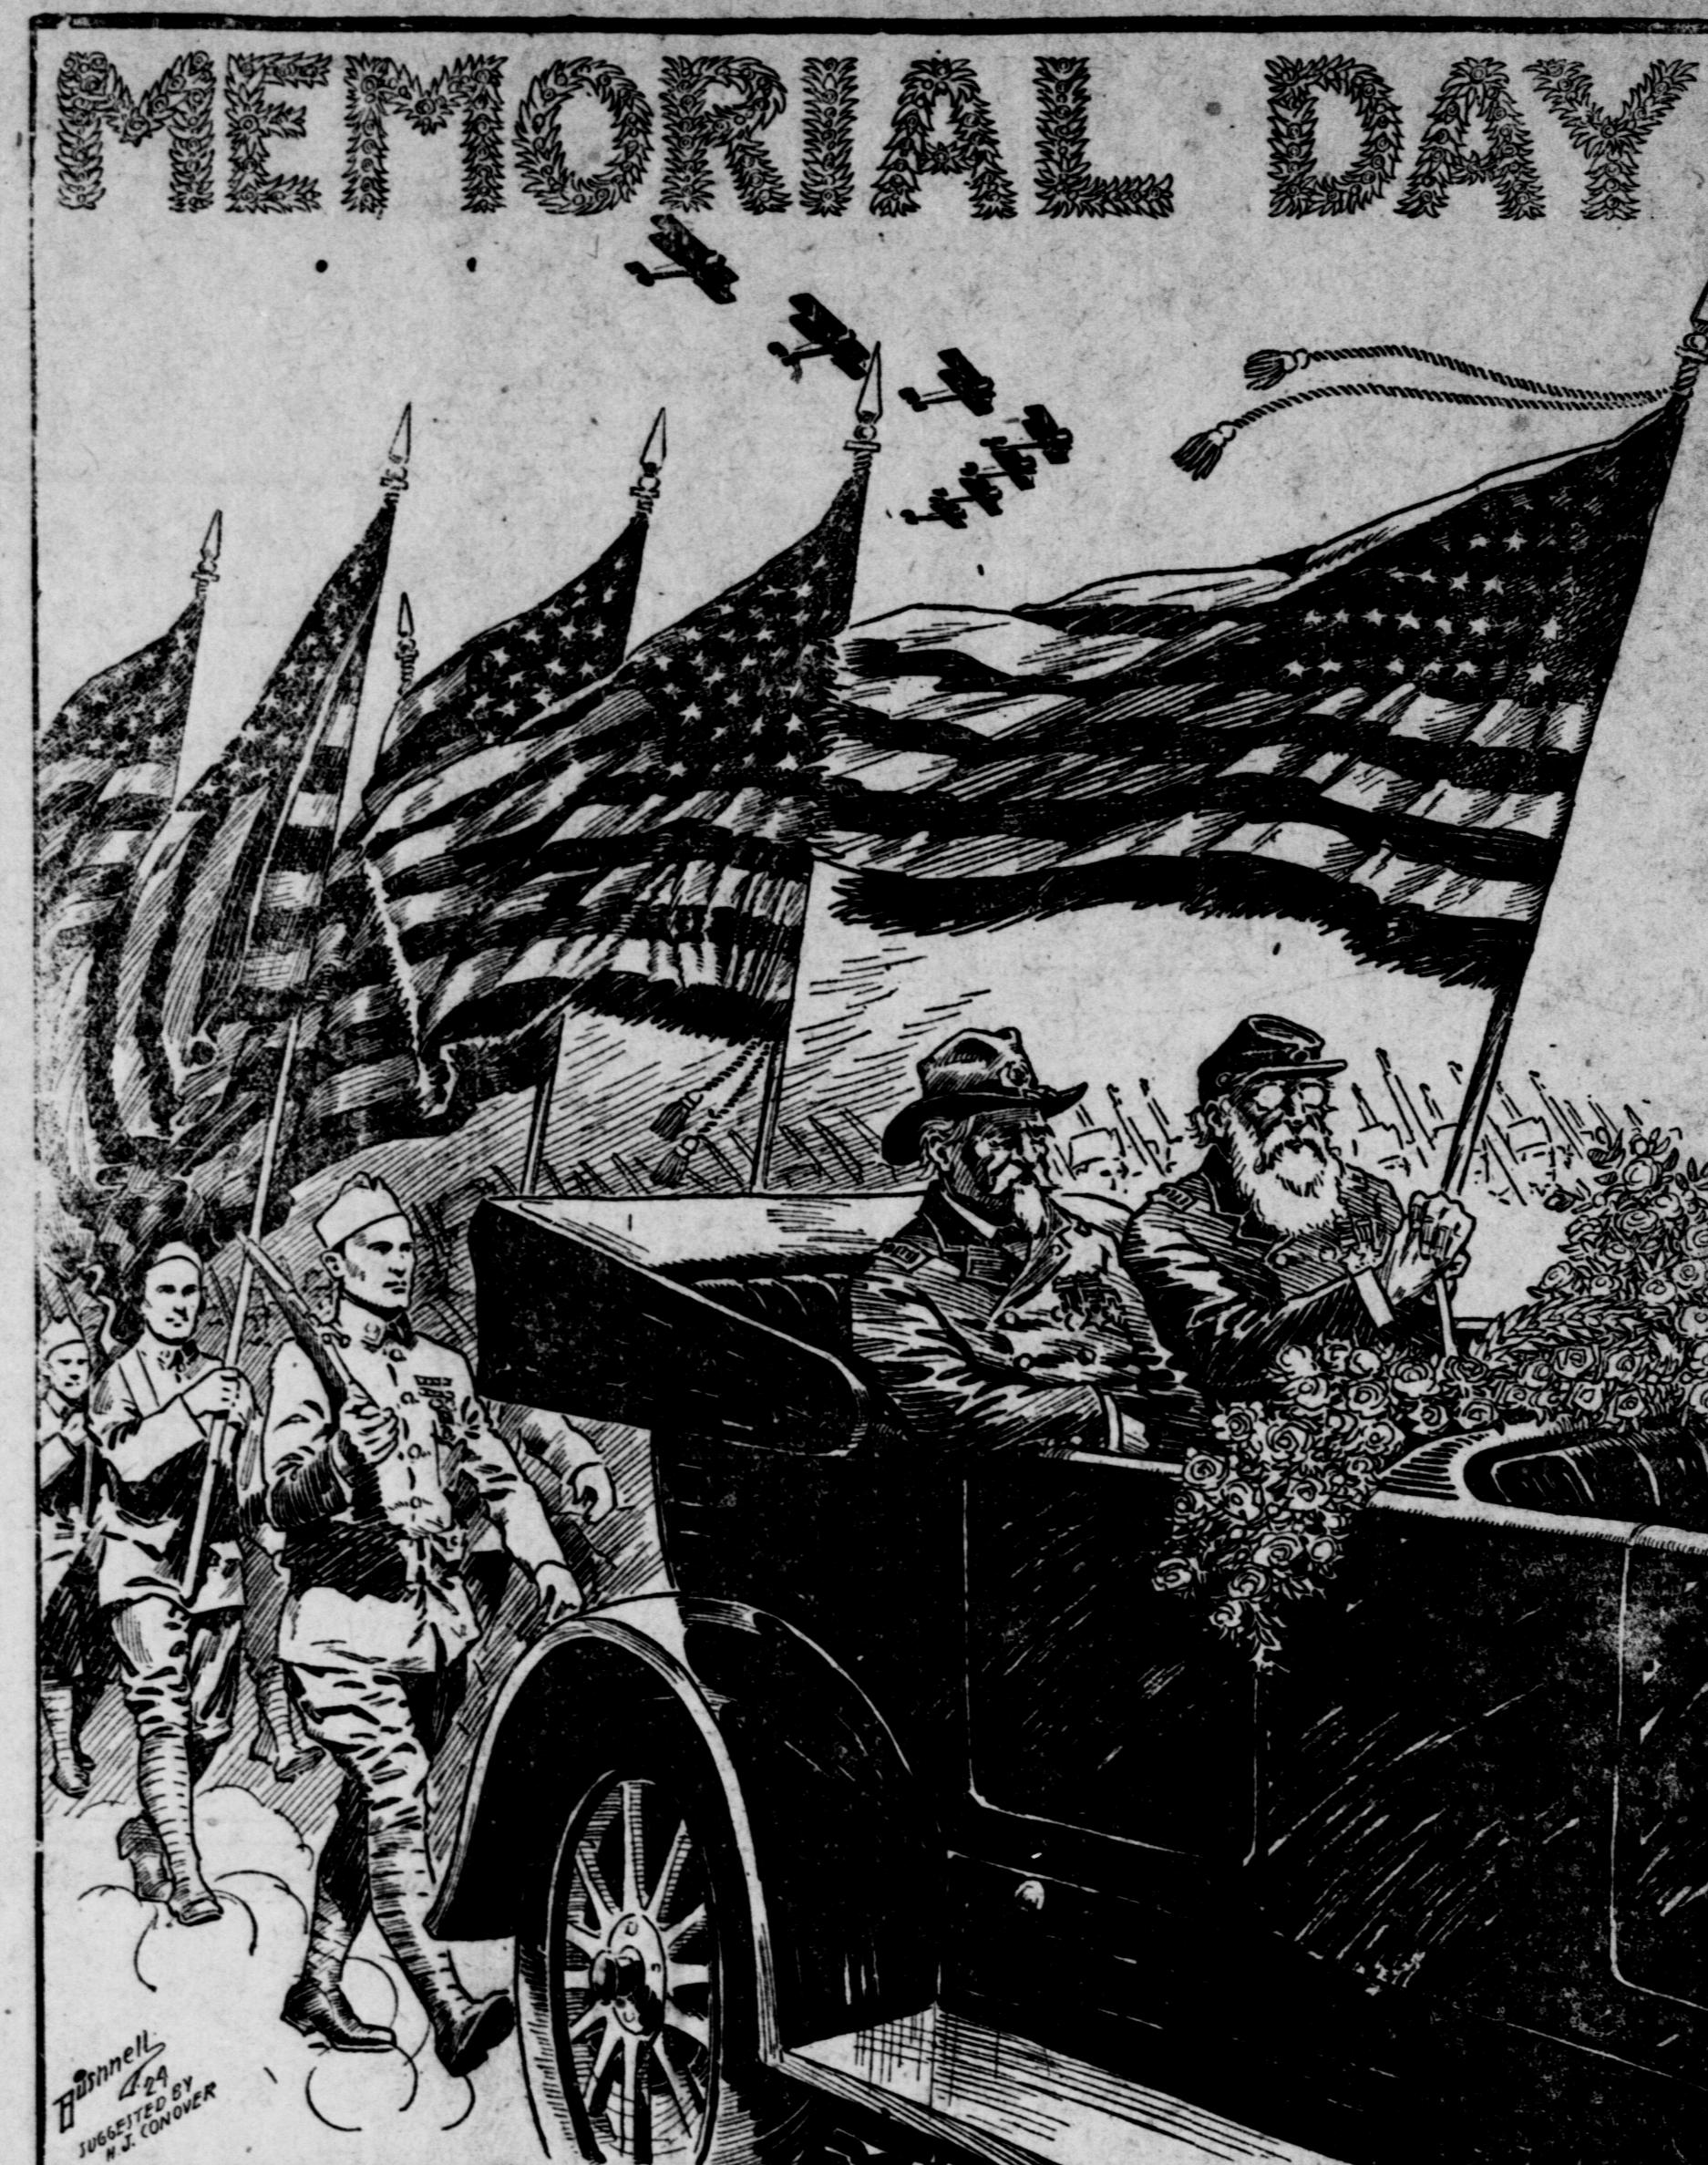

(By the Associated Press)

LONDON, May 30.—The Allies intend to keep a firm hand on military control of Germany by maintaining the commission of control in full operation until the disarmament demands made in the Treaty of Versailles are fully executed, according to a long note from the council of ambassadors sent to Berlin from Paris today.

OFFICERS SEARCHING FOR MURDEROUS CAR DRIVER

(By the Associated Press)

OKLAHOMA CITY, May 30.—With two men under surveillance police and county officers today continued to search for trail of a speeding automobile which last night struck and killed Lois Hough, 22 as she walked on the paved highway near Bethany a few miles west of here. The driver of the car did not stop. Hough was taken to a doctor's office in Bethany by passing motorists. He died enroute.

OLIVE DRAB OUT FOR PARIS EVENT

War Veterans Lay Wreath on Unknown Soldier's Tomb In Foreign Rites

(By the Associated Press)

PARIS, May 30.—The olive drab uniforms of American veterans grouped about the Arc de Triomphe at noon today brought back to onlookers the jubilee year after the armistice when American troops played so prominent a part in the celebration of the American national memorial day in France.

After two days service in the American Episcopal Cathedral and the American Protestant and Catholic churches, the members of the American colony, including many reserve officers spending the holidays here, gathered at France's national shrine in order that the unknown soldier should not seem to be forgotten by his comrades in arms honoring their own dead.

Two platoons of French infantry and two of the republican guard lined the approach to the tomb as the American Legion's color guard advanced and took up a position before the memorial. Then Sheldon Whitehouse, counselor of the American embassy, representing Ambassador Herrick, accompanied by the military and naval attaches, laid a wreath at the feet of the sleeping soldier while the guard of honor presented arms.

Afterward wreaths from the American Legion, the American Women's club, Golden Gate Post of the American Legion from California, and other organizations, were deposited on the shrine.

AMERICAN FLYERS HOPE TO RESUME TRIP SUNDAY

(By the Associated Press)

KASHMIGURA, Japan, May 30.—The American round the world flyers still hoped to get away tomorrow on the next leg of their flight, though possibly they will not be able to do so until Sunday. They hope to make two jumps the day they leave here, going to Kushimoto to take on fuel and thence on to Kagoshima, their last stop in Japan, before darkness.

Hectic Hue in Footwear Not Accepted by Shiekish Youths

Hectic creations in footwear do not appeal to the fastidious youth of this city. Such is the decree of the group who follow the ever changing fashion with intent to dress up to the minute.

Primitive shades of red and green, grouped or displayed in fanciful patterns upon the footwear presented for masculine approval in this city, found no popularity among the younger and sheikish generation. The streets of Ada have not been profaned by flashing shoes adorning the pedal extremities of the city's brightest lights.

The only sales reported of the flashy wear, consisting of brilliant green patent leather creations, were made to ambitious sheiks from a neighboring township who were doubtless drawn to the striking appearance in the hope of attracting attention, little realizing that the attention thus secured rarely passes beyond the shoes themselves to the wearer.

er shoe, with white slips across the front, being of a more modest coloring, has found favor here among the masculine dressers, putting its more strikingly colored rival in the shade in demand, if not in brilliancy.

All combinations are favored among the feminine buyers here. Red, pink, green and other shades, with varying and numerous two and three color arrangements, are proving popular for feminine summer wear.

These are usually combined with a becoming shade of hose to produce a colorful effect.

Quality, Price and Delivery Of Books Pertinent Problems on Hand

President A. Linscheid of East Central State Teachers' college and an appointed member of the Oklahoma Textbook Commission believes that the securing of the best and latest books at a price at least as cheap as these books are sold in any state in the union and to secure delivery before school opens in the fall are the outstanding problems facing the commission at the present time.

President Linscheid who recently returned from the initial meeting of the commission is in a position to form a definite and competent opinion of the needs and necessary functions of the commission in handling the tangled affairs of the free distribution of textbooks over the state.

ADA CLOSES DOORS TO HONOR HEROES

City Draped in Half-mast Flags For Memorial Day Services

The key to Ada's business regime was turned in place at 1:30 today and the footsteps of Ada merchants and residents of the city halted at the Ada Memorial convention hall to pay respect to the Dead of War from the list of sons of Pontotoc county and the entire nation.

At 2:30 today Ada's Main street lay deserted between the rows of flags draped at half-mast and the merchants who contribute to its livelihood in the every-day walks of life were assembled at the local shrine in memoriam to those who paid the supreme sacrifice in their service of their country.

The memorial services were scheduled to start at 2 o'clock this afternoon with President A. Linscheid of East Central State Teachers' college selected to lace a fitting eulogy as a passing tribute to the sacrifices of the county's war dead.

Following the services at the Convention Hall, veterans under the direction of Chaplain Charles L. Widney will place a floral tribute of home grown flowers over the graves of war heroes, now resting in the Rosedale cemetery.

The reverential hands of veterans will not only pause over the graves of World War dead but will honor all dead of war in their pilgrimage to the cemetery. Many of those sleeping in the legion plot at the Rosedale cemetery were transplanted here from the hills of France.

Early this morning, Ada took on a memorial appearance, when members of the Norman Howard post, placed flags in front of business houses of Ada. Before noon today practically every business house on Main street presented Old Glory to the line of flags along the street.

Poppies, flowers of the Legion, were being sold early this morning and before noon practically the entire quota of 1100 had been sold.

Representatives of 20 Latin American countries have come to the United States to inspect the roads. If they drive like some of our motorists, they won't see much of the roads.

Home Talent Play To be Presented Saturday Night

The home talent play, "Mrs. and Mr. Polly Tick", presented last night at the Convention Hall under the auspices of the Ada chapter of Eastern Star was a decided success and has created such interest that the play is being offered again by request.

A large audience responded to the announcement of the play last night and apparently enjoyed every moment of the presentation.

The chorus numbers were exceptionally pleasing and met with the repeated applause of the audience.

NATION STOPS TO HAND TRIBUTE TO WORLD WAR DEAD

President Coolidge Slated to Deliver Memorial Day Address

PERSHING COMMENTS

Oklahoma City Has Memorial Day Services For Her War Dead

(By the Associated Press)

WASHINGTON, May 30.—With President Coolidge delivering the principal Memorial Day address in the Arlington amphitheater at one o'clock, all branches of the government, its armed forces and patriotic and religious organizations, today expected to set a precedent for future Memorial Day exercises in the Arlington Cemetery.

All executive departments of the government were closed for the day and the senate was in recess. Arrangements had been made to make the president's address audible by radio to three or four millions persons throughout the country. The address was to be broadcasted by stations WEAS at New York, WJAR at Providence, Rhode Island, and WCAT at Washington.

Morning exercises at Arlington, arranged by the Woman's Relief Corps, Daughters of Veterans, Ladies of the Grand Army of the Republic, Legion of Loyal Women, Sons of Veterans and Auxiliaries included a preliminary parade around the White House by veterans of the Civil, Spanish and World Wars, with survivors of the Confederate forces participating.

CAMP MERRITT, N. J., Memorial Day.—Memorial ceremonies would be meaningless sham if the American people did not intend to profit by the bitter lessons of the war, General Pershing declared in a prepared address today at exercises attending the dedication of a monument erected in memory of those who died at Camp Merritt during the war.

"Here, under the stress of emergency, many for the first time had to learn the most elementary lessons of obedience," General Pershing said.

"Here, in a few crowded days or hours, they faced the most trying concentration of administrative detail and classification under adverse circumstances. But Camp Merritt was only one example of the results of inadequate preparation during peace to meet the exigencies of war, a fact all too forcibly borne in upon the minds of our troops as time went on.

"If we are not to take counsel together as to the future then our meeting today is a meaningless sham, our sentiments for those we mourn insincere, and we shall be unworthy as a people of the heritage their sacrifices have saved for us."

OKLAHOMA CITY, May 30.—Oklahoma City today paid tribute of honor to her boys who died in the nation's service. Following a memorial service at the Shrine temple where Ed S. Vaught delivered an address in eulogy of dead members of the American Legion. After this the Legion, national guard and friends of the fallen soldiers went to the two cemeteries of the city and laid wreaths on the graves of those who died in battle for the flag. Salutes were fired and taps sounded by members of the guard.

SPECIAL SERVICES TO BE HELD FOR LEGIONNAIRES

Members of the Norman Howard post, American Legion are urged to attend the special services at St. Luke's Episcopal church Sunday morning at 11 o'clock conducted by Chaplain Charles L. Widney.

The anniversaries for the service have been sent to members of the post.

The Sunday morning sermon at the First Baptist church will be a special service for the college students. The pastor will deliver a sermon for their benefit at this hour. It is hoped that a large attendance will be had. A section of the church will be reserved for those who can not be there on the exact hour.

EARL COOPER IN LEAD AT MIDWAY OF SPEED RACES

Annual Five Hundred Mile Speedway at Indianapolis Under Way

BEING HARD PUSHED

Hill and Murphy Follow Cooper in Furious Drive For Lead

(By the Associated Press)

SPEEDWAY, Indianapolis, May 30.—Earl Cooper riding as if luck charms supplied him at racing stands throughout the country which brought him a fortune, was leading when the half way mark was passed today at the annual 500 miles race at the speedway. Cooper was pressed closely, however, by Bennett Hill and Jimmie Murphy, who were in the same lap with him in second and third positions respectively.

Cooper's time for the 250 miles was 2:31:51.53 an average of 98.78 miles per hour. The best previous average time for 150 miles was made in 1921 when it was 94.02 miles per hour.

Cooper was compelled to make his stop in the 105th lap and Murphy then took the lead with Hill in second place. Cooper was away again at 1:35 o'clock amid the crowd's cheers.

When 300 miles had been run Murphy was leading by virtue of Cooper's enforced stop for gasoline and oil. Cooper set a terrific pace after his stop and remained in second place. Corum was still in third and Hill fourth. Murphy's time for 300 miles was 3:7.21.53 an average of 98.17 miles per hour.

Cooper regained the lead when Murphy made a brief stop on the 120th lap for gasoline and oil.

Despite the fast pace maintained only one car was out of the race at the halfway point. This was Ernie Ansterberg's car which skidded and overturned in the first lap. The driver as only slightly injured and participated in the race later as a relief driver.

Following the three leaders the next in order were L. L. Corum, Harry Hartz, Ira Vail, Eddie Hearne, Antoine Moore, Julie Ellingson and Fred Comer.

Tommie Milton, last year's winner, after a day of trouble retired in the 110th lap when a gas tank support broke for the second time.

The speedway management announced that between 135,000 and 140,000 persons were in the grounds. This breaks last year's record attendance of 125,000.

SPEEDWAY, Indianapolis, IND.; May 30.—Twenty-two flying little speeders dashed away on the annual five-hundred mile race at the Indianapolis speedway promptly at ten a. m. today. As the racers got away to a flying start they were given thunderous cheers from the solidly packed stands.

Jimmy Murphy at ten miles led the drivers at an average of 98.7 miles per hour. Benny Hill and Harry Hartz were in second and third positions.

It was announced that Joe Boyer in winning the first lap had established a record for the first two and a half miles in any race on the local track, his average being 98.39 miles an hour.

Ernie Ansterberg, an Indianapolis driver, was in first accident when his car turned over on the back stretch during the first lap. He was not seriously injured but his car was out of the contest.

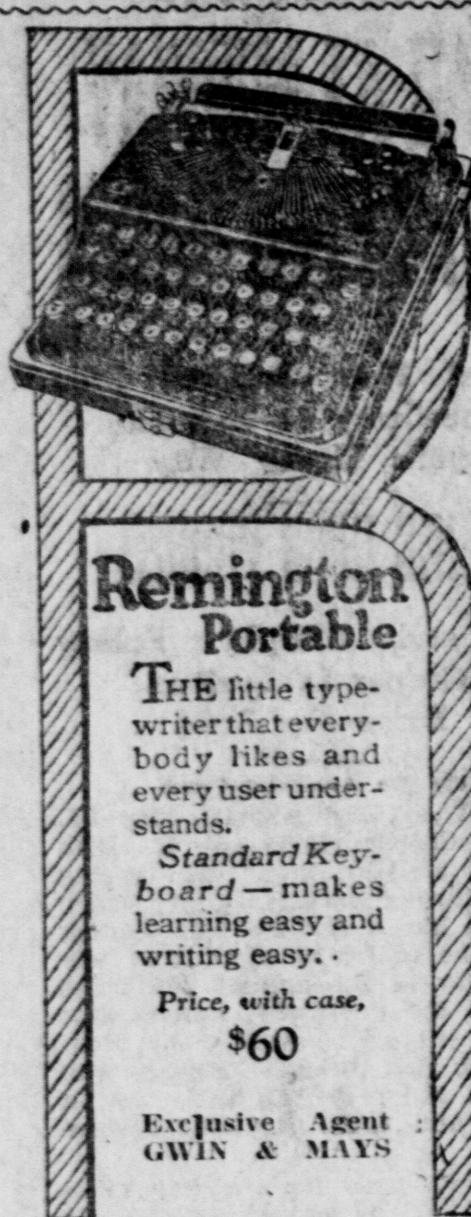

At fifty miles Harry Hartz held the lead, trailed closely by Cooper and Hill in second and third places

"Our appeal," said Stanley J. Quinn, directing vice-president of the local non-partisan National Convention committee, "is aimed at these motorists and the tourists who will motor from long distances to remain in the metropolis throughout the convention. It will be absolutely impossible for them to find parking space or garage room within easy walking distance of the Madison Square Garden section or, for that matter, anywhere in central Manhattan."

"So the automobile clubs, transit companies, police and convention directors have joined in this 'Park Your Car Outside' campaign. We want the tourists to come but we want to make things pleasant for them when they arrive."

All motorists from within commuting areas are being urged to park their cars near rapid-transit terminals in the residential sections, when they can ride by subway, elevated or bus directly to Madison Square Park, quickly and cheaply.

Motorists from afar are asked also to park in the outskirts, either in the areas at rapid-transit terminals over which automobile associations and police will stand guard, or in the numerous garages in the suburbs. Various agencies are working with garage owners toward establishing a fair price system of storage and repair charges, so that there be no gouging.

JAPANESE LIGHT CRUISERS SHOW DEFECTS ON TRIALS

POSTMASTERS MEET AT KANSAS CITY

Missouri, Kansas and Oklahoma Postmasters Meet In Annual Parley

(By the Associated Press)

KANSAS CITY, Mo., May 30.—Postmasters from Missouri, Kansas and Oklahoma are assembling here today for the annual convention of the Tri-state Postmasters association which convenes here tomorrow and continues through Saturday. Between 300 and 500 postmasters are expected to be present, according to Bayless Steele, Kansas City's postmaster and chairman of the arrangements committee.

Convention headquarters will be at the Baltimore hotel, where all of the business sessions will be held.

The program, as announced by Mr. Steele, calls for meetings of the state associations Friday morning at 10 o'clock, followed by a general session at 11 o'clock. At this session addresses of welcome will be delivered by Mayor Albert L. Beach, F. J. Bannister, president of the chamber of commerce and Mr. Steele. These will be responded to by W. G. Johnston postmaster, Oklahoma City and Charles H. Sessions, president of the Kansas postmasters association, Topeka. The meeting will be presided over by Omer K. Benedict, postmaster, Tulsa, Okla., and president of the Oklahoma postmasters association.

Addressed on various phases of postoffice problems and the relation of the postoffice to the public will feature the afternoon session. An open forum discussion of district office accounts and relating problems will follow the addresses. A banquet in the evening will terminate the first day's program.

A business meeting will be held Saturday morning, following which the delegates will visit mail order houses of Montgomery, Ward & Co., and the National Cloak and Suit company. A luncheon will be served the visitors at Montgomery, Ward's at noon.

A two-hour motor trip over Kansas City's boulevard system in the afternoon will be the concluding feature of the convention.

Special railroad rates have been granted the postmasters and it is expected that a large number of postmasters will remain to attend the annual Shrine convention here next week.

HARRY CAREY HAS A THRILLING ROLE

"The Lightning Rider," which the American Theatre is showing today gives Harry Carey a splendid opportunity to show how versatile he is, because he has a dual characterization. By day, before the villagers, he is "slow Phil Morgan," who finds all his excitement in whittling dolls for children, but at night he becomes the fearless man of action, scouring the country to find the Black Mask, the bandit who is the bane of the country-side.

To draw the fire of the outlaw, Phil dresses like him. He makes love to his lady fair in the interesting garb, and, when the lady's father is murdered, Phil finds himself in rather a tight role. It is this and other situations as thrilling that make "The Lightning Rider" first-rate entertainment. The suspense is sustained throughout and there is plenty of rapid-fire action.

ADJUSTING THE ANCIENT GRUDGE

By GRACE CANFIELD

(© 1924, McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

"Now look here, dad," protested Ethan, "what's the use of being pig-headed? Just give me one honest reason for being so set against Tim Bailey."

Slow red surged to the forehead which Carter Enright's 30 years at sea had tanned to a deep bronze. "We always have been enemies," he replied. "Fifteen years ago he stole on my land in the dead o' night and cut down three pine trees. Fine and straight they were," mourned the sailor, "fit masts for three tall ships. And he cut them into firewood!"

"Fifteen years!" began Ethan, and stopped. It was no use talking to his father in this mood. Sighing, he left the room.

Carter Enright did not notice. His mind was with his old enemy. "I told Tim Bailey 15 years ago," he muttered to himself, "that if he or any of his set foot on my land I would shoot at sight. I meant it and I mean it still."

"Dad!" Elsie Bailety twined coaxing arms about her father's neck. "Why don't you and Mr. Enright become friends?" It's perfectly silly for two grown men like you to hold a grudge."

Tim Bailey laughed, as he always did when this subject was mentioned. "I'm not holding a grudge. I cut three pine trees off the edge of my land, and Carter claimed they were his. When I wouldn't pay up, he threatened to shoot at sight. I still won't pay up, and I happen to know that he keeps his gun oiled."

"Oh! Then you must pay up," decided Elsie. "What would be the cost of three pine trees—"

"With interest?" "With interest," she continued calmly, "be to you?"

He shook his head. "They were my trees, you know. Besides, there is a pride about these things."

"Pride!" Elsie cried out in disappointment. "And would you let your pride spoil my happiness?"

In great distress Tim Bailey tried to comfort her. "And how can the quarrel of two old men affect your happiness, child?" he asked gently.

"Because Ethan and I—" A sob completed the sentence.

"Well, child," he spoke briskly, "run along, and I'll see what I can do. It would never do to have Carter shoot you—and he would."

Elsie kissed him delightedly. "Oh, dad, I knew you would find a way!"

For over an hour Bailey sat where she had left him, before the open fire.

Two days later, by Ethan, Tim sent a message to his ancient foe. "Ask Carter Enright if a full payment, with interest, for the pine trees I took from his land will make him forget his enmity." As Ethan left, Tim muttered to himself. "They were on my land, though."

The next day came the reply. "If Tim Bailey will admit that he stole three pine trees from my land, and if he will pay for them in full with accrued interest, I will forgive him." They were the same autocratic terms, stated years ago, with which his enemy had consistently refused to comply.

It was a bitter pill for Bailey to swallow, but he saw certain compensations ahead. "It shall be done," he said, and Elsie was radiant with joy.

Carter Enright was nonplussed at all this. If he and Bailey could be come friends, what might not happen? He was even a little disappointed in this unexpected weakening of the old feud. At first he suspected a trap, but Ethan reassured him eagerly.

"He gave in because of Elsie and me," he confessed, meekly, but he did not quail under the old sailor's fierce glance.

"Thundering brimstone!" began Carter Enright, and stopped. Why should he mind the marriage more than Tim Bailey? Could he be less forgiving? He sighed deeply, and, with the sigh, submitted.

"Oh, but 'twas a man's quarrel," he mourned. "I shall miss it sorely, Ethan."

"Twas a bonny grudge," regretted the sailor. "I have not set foot on those boundaries for 15 years." He fell into silence.

A month later Ethan and Elsie were married, urged on to haste by the fear that the old quarrel might be renewed.

After the young couple had left town a note was delivered to the old seaman. Unbelieving, Enright read the words twice, and in such a rage as he had not known since his seafaring days, rushed out of doors. Directly in rear of the house was piled row upon row of pine lengths, cut for firewood. His vocabulary for once failing him, Enright turned again to the note.

"Here is the wood," it read. "It has been in my shed for 15 years, and I'm glad to get rid of it. For interest I have added one more pine tree."

Tricked! He had been cheated into making peace with a lifelong enemy, and had given his word. He stopped, and read the note again. One more pine tree! Filled with the blackest suspicion, he strode to the garage and drove out to look at the boundary he had left to overseers for 15 years. There it was. Surrounded by white chips was the stump of a newly felled tree.

The old man hastily headed for home, but he was swearing no longer. Instead, he laughed aloud, once, just as Tim Bailey had done. This gratuitous insult had filled him with new life. The old feud was done with, but the new one had begun. A bonny grudge!

BAHAMAS WOULD EXTEND RUM TRADE IN UNITED STATES BY DISTILLING RYE FOR DRINKERS

(By the Associated Press)

WASHINGTON, May 30.—The fluctuations of the financial fortunes of the governments of neighboring British colonies, for instance of the Bahama Islands, lifted from debt to prosperity since United States went dry, and of the Bermuda Islands, which have won from the Bahamas much profitable business in exporting liquor to the American coasts, is being watched with interest by the prohibition enforcement officers here of the government. Bermuda now has a handsome surplus in its treasury.

The latest development in the Bahamas, a move to start a distillery to manufacture American rye whiskey, all stocks of which, as far as the bootlegging business is concerned, are practically exhausted, has come to the attention of prohibition officers. In the Bahama assembly W. K. Moore recently moved the appointment of a select committee to enquire into and report on the working of the spirits and beer manufacturers' act of 1920. Speaking to the motion, Mr. Moore told his fellow legislators that opportunities were coming to their island. The Bahamas, he declared, had encouraged the liquor traffic, but there was no American rye whiskey available, the enormous supplies exported from the United States to those islands before prohibition having been exhausted by the bootlegging business in the four years since then.

Persons interested in the distillery Mr. Moore stated, believed the manufacture of rye whiskey and its export to the American coast would be the means of resuscitating the islands' rum running trade and add to Bahama's revenues, no at low ebb because much of the rum running business was being conducted from Bermuda. A committee of seven members was appointed to report on the working of the spirits and beer manufacturers' act.

Speaking of the proposed rye whiskey distillery, a Bahama newspaper remarks that if the Bahamas can supply the unsatisfied demand for rye whiskey, the colony once again may have a monopoly and attract business with a revenue of $3 for each proof gallon distilled. Also it may again be able to insist that buyers take Scotch along with the rye. If this happens the paper suggests that the duty on imported whiskies be raised to $6 again, and kept there.

A year ago the tariff on liquors was reduced from $6 to $3 a case in order to stop the decline in the traffic. Through the reduction it is claimed the colony lost more than $500,000 in revenue. A proposal now before the legislature calls for a further reduction to $1 a case.

L. W. Young, member of the assembly and one of those strongly ing expenses because they profess to foresee a curtailment of the colony's revenues from the liquor traffic. A report to the assembly recently indicated that had it not been for the heavy receipts from liquor duties, the colony, during the last fiscal year, would have faced a deficit.

(Selective Emigration Proposed. By the Associated Press)

LONDON.—A scheme to extend the system of emigration by nomination is outlined by the Overseas Settlement committee in its report for 1923.

It is intended to establish collective nomination by churches, philanthropic societies and other organizations overseas. These will appoint local committees to obtain guarantees from local residents of employment and accommodation for settlers in their districts. They will send nominations to the church or other organization in this country to which they are affiliated, for selection of emigrants, who, on arrival in the dominions, will be cared for by the local committees.

FEDERAL INSPECTOR TO SUPERVISE FRUIT CROP

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla., May

30.—A federal inspector from the United States department of agriculture to supervise the inspection and certification of Oklahoma's fruit and truck crops will arrive about June 1, to instruct the state inspectors, according to Ed C. Dustin, secretary of the state market commission. Eight field workers and three of the office personnel in the bureau will be instructed by the federal agent.

Joint inspection by state and national representatives will be inaugurated about the middle of June at Ardmore when the inspection of the first shipment of Oklahoma cantaloupes will be made Mr. Dustin said. Although shippers usually are charged $4 a car for the joint inspection an initial charge of $2 will be made in Oklahoma this year. This probably will be raised to $4 next year, it was said.

The co-operative inspection system will speed up interstate movement of truck and fruits, the market commission secretary said. The state and federal stamps of approval on the car will insure its immediate acceptance by the state in which the destination of the car is located.

Not only does the joint inspection certificate accelerate the transportation of the commodity it assures a more ready market, as jobbers have great faith in the joint inspection and grading and buy more freely, Dustin said.

BIBLE THOUGHT FOR TODAY

HE THAT BY USURY and unjust gain increaseth his substance, he shall gather it for him that will pity the poor. A faithful man shall abound in blessings: but he that maketh haste to be rich shall not be innocent.—Proverbs 28:8, 20.

TOO MANY COLLEGE GRADUATES?

Several times in the last year we have heard the sentiment expressed that there are too many people going to college. Some of the college men themselves are becoming alarmed and at least one eastern university is taking steps to select its students from the body offering to matriculate.

This naturally brings one to think of the matter seriously. Here in our own state there have been enormous increases in the student bodies of all the colleges. The same is true throughout the country. A few years ago the college man was the exception. It now appears that in the future he is to be the rule.

But what are the needs of the world? Can these needs best be met by college men or by those not having college training?

We are no longer a rural people with land to spare. We are now more than half in the towns and cities and the idle land has been occupied. This means that in the not distant future every acre of ground must produce twice as much as it is producing now. It means that twice as much beef, twice as much pork, twice as much dairy products must be produced without the increase in the amount of land under cultivation. Improved methods must be found. While these may be found by the uneducated man, science is generally in the hands of the college bred man. While a manufacturer or a financier may not be college bred, almost every scientist of any consequence has had the advantage of college training.

Electrical development is in its infancy. The water power we have available is immense, but will not take care of the needs of the country. Methods of extracting this giant force from nature must be improved or the tides must be harnessed. In the next half century there may be a revolution in this, and this revolution will be brought about by the college man, granting that it is done at all.

It is only a matter of a few years until the supply of forests which furnish the pulp for making paper will be exhausted. Substitutes must be found. When they are it will be by college men, and more not fewer of them will be needed.

Dry areas must have water or methods found for growing profitable and needed crops without water. College men will do this when it is done.

Better ways of getting water to many of the large cities must be found. College men will find them.

Civilized man is apparently facing his greatest war, a war with pests, visible and invisible. Fields which a few years ago yielded giant piles of cotton now produce little or nothing. The land is still fertile, but the boll weevil has done his work. College men will find a way of fighting the boll weevil, though to date he seems to be an enemy worthy of our most daring soldiers with the most highly developed weapons.

Fruit regions a few years ago did not suffer greatly from insects. Now it costs millions of dollars to spray the trees and the growing fruit in order to get marketable products.

Gardens suffer from the onslaughts of pests. Animals must be protected from them. They seem to be everywhere. The college man is needed not only in the school room but in the field with chemistry and physics and all the knowledge of the ages.

Yes, men and women are going to college. But from this we need fear no evil. On the other hand, we are simply preparing against the time when this knowledge will be needed in the day's work. Skill and industry combined with the highest knowledge are what the world needs today and will need tomorrow and tomorrow and tomorrow.

SHRINE TEMPLE FOR ADA.

A. W. Parker believes that Ada has a good chance to land the Shrine temple at the Shrine Imperial Council at Kansas City next week. He says that the presence of all the Shriners possible from this section, however, will be needed.

The News hopes that all the local Shriners who can possibly do so will make the pilgrimage and help the matter along. We know that every one will do what he can, however, and we expect to see a great Shrine temple in this hustling little city of Oklahoma before many more moons have grown to rotundity.

Samuel G. Blythe, political writer for the Saturday Evening Post, declares that for once not a man in the Democratic party has any assurance whatever of what the national convention or who the nominee will be, predicting that it is highly probable that a man comparatively unknown will eventually win. Perhaps that would be just as well for there would be less occasion for dissension. Cleveland was practically unknown when elected governor of New York and about all the rest of the nation knew about him in 1884 was that he had wallop the Republican nominee for the gubernatorial race two years before. No one could get anywhere with a row because the nominee was so little known that there was nothing to row about.

Boyce was arrested by Luther Bishop, city detective, Tuesday night but was booked only for vagrancy under the name of John Doe.

Interest Growing In Revival Meet at Church of Christ

Growing interest is seen in the revival at the Church of Christ.

Yesterday evening the evangelist spoke of "Belief and Unbelief."

"Paul says: By faith we understand that the worlds were framed by the word of God." There are many things we understand by faith. The man who rejects part of the word because he sees not how it can be and rejects other portions because he sees how it can be, is not a man of faith.

"We are told that Abraham went to go into Canaan and into it he came. We are further informed that he made the journey by faith. Others meant to enter Caanan but into it did not come. Why? So we see they could not enter in because of unbelief!"

"Unbelief caused our Lord to marvel. He upbraided his disciples with their unbelief and hardness of heart."

"Unbelief will keep us out of heaven. It is the chief sin of our day. It is the sin that besets us."

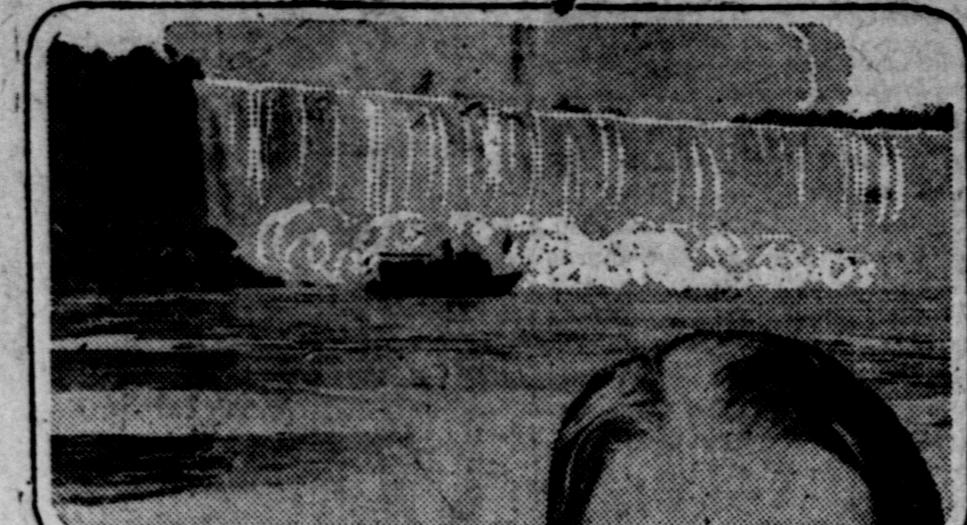

"The faith that profits is the faith that works by love."

There will be baptismal service immediately following the preaching this evening.

Subject for this evening: "Are you a friend of the Lord?"

Judge Hughes and associates got a nice showing of oil in their test in section 28-4-7, seven miles northeast of Ada, late Thursday night. With the sand drilled three feet, the oil rose considerably in the hole. The well is making about a half million feet of gas, and Judge Hughes believes there is enough oil to make a paying well. The depth is 711 feet.

This well is doing something different in this country. At 500 feet it showed considerable gas and has been getting showing of oil and gas ever since.

It is not known how deep the sand is, and the Judge expects to test the sand out before drilling further into it. It will not take a big production to make a paying proposition at that depth and he is not taking chances on spoiling a good thing.

CORRALING ABSENTEE CONVICTS EXPENSIVE

OKLAHOMA CITY.—The state of Oklahoma has paid out $2,300 to arrest and return to the penitentiary at McAlester men released on leaves of absence granted by the former administration, Governor Trapp announced Thursday.

Trapp said that when he took office more than 100 convicts were at liberty under such leaves.

"As soon as my pardon and parole policy became known, many of these men attempted to escape and many already in other states did not return," declared Trapp.

To date 89 convicts have been returned to the penitentiary, including 19 life terms; of the balance, 28 had been convicted of robbery, burglary and grand larceny and six were serving terms for manslaughter.

The boxers, housed in cottages a few miles apart on the Lake Michigan shore, planned to spend a quiet Memorial Day, with only light exercise to keep their muscles loosened. Reports that Carpenter's hands were in bad shape were denied by Francois DesCamps, the Frenchman's wily manager, who declared that Georges' maulers were perfect.

Carpenter finished his training in the open yesterday in spite of a chill wind off the lake. When the Frenchman finished he seemed to be perfect.

The cold wind forced Gibbons to cancel his workout outdoors yesterday. Indoors he tugged at the pulleys, skipped the rope, and shadowboxed.

makes its levy in accordance with these conditions and will be able to reduce the local rate to about six mills of the excess levy and five mills allowed by the constitution of the state or a total school rate of eleven, instead of fifteen mills. It is evident that if the valuations for the school district are more than six and a half-million and if the school budget can be reduced lower than one hundred and four thousand, the rate may be reduced even lower than above indicated.

"In a few sleeps. Before a man comes from the hills. Shunca-luta must be cunning as the kit fox. He has things to do first."

He rose and left them, still wearing his blanket so that no man might look on his face. As the prisoners walked back to the village Scissors explained the talk to his companion, and said:

"He'll stick to his bargain, too. He'd rather have a hundred men escape than to be laughed at as a man who has lost his medicine. He'd rather have a thousand escape than to have every dish he touches break in his hands. Stop worrying." When they came to Sorrel Horse's lodge he was standing in the entrance, his eyes glittering ominously. He held up a jug and wiped his lips and said:

"The medicine stops working against Shunca-luta. He drinks without the jug breaking."

"Poof!" growled Scissors. "Because Two Knives Talking stopped the medicine from working until Shunca-luta could pay for it does he think the medicine grows weak? I will break this jug!"

With a low howl of fear Sorrel Horse thrust the jug inside the lodge and begged:

"Walt, Shunca-luta buys the medicine. He wanted to see how strong is the white man's heart."

With a menacing scowl Scissors passed on, telling Dinsdale:

"Have to watch him like a snake. I might have known he would have risked one more jug. But he'll be good now."

"What the devil is it, and what is it trying to do?" he whispered.

"The pipe's a medicine pipe. It must be Shunca-luta. The head covering and hoop tell the people he has dreamed of an elk and has visited an Elk lodge in his sleep, and is now under the protection of their medicine. He's trying to act like an elk. See! The people understand. None of the women stays on the windward side and no one goes near him. They're making themselves believe he is an elk. Now what is he up to?"

Shunca-luta had turned between two lodges and was running rapidly. Ahead of him was a wide mire spot. After he had passed this he turned and nodded his head toward it. As he moved on men and women pressed on after him and began clapping their hands to their mouths to express amazement. Scissors left the lodge and hurried toward them, Dinsdale remaining behind. As Scissors drew up the group dissolved and moved away from him. He examined the ground to see what they had been staring at. Smothering a smile he returned to Dinsdale.

"What's the row?" asked Dinsdale.

"That fellow is very cunning. There are tracks of an elk in the muddy spot. They really believe he wore the feet of an elk in passing over it. Of course he took some hoofs and made the tracks early this morning. Now he runs and jumps over the spot and they'll always believe his feet turned to hoofs long enough for him to leave the tracks."

"Pretty shallow," grumbled Dinsdale. "How could he know some one hadn't seen the tracks right after he made them?"

"It's all the same," said Scissors. "Then they'd believe he had passed that way already and had left them. After we've eaten we'll look him up."

"I'll stay here. Only time I want to see any of them is when I've got my guns with me."

The young girl who had broken the jug brought their breakfast, her bright eyes fairly shining with excitement. Much of her former fear had vanished, and when Scissors questioned her she readily told him:

"Shunca-luta comes back from the hills with an elk dream. He sacrificed two of his ponies. Now he dreams of an elk and the elks give him a very strong medicine. He says he will make the jug-breaking medicine after a few sleeps."

She ran away to observe more wonders, and after Scissors had translated her speech Dinsdale growled and complained:

"I told you so. I knew that devil would ring in a cold deck."

Scissors smiled contentedly and said: "You're forgetting the two ponies he's 'sacrificed.' He's smart. He's working them up by degrees to believe he can break jugs. He'll have them at the proper pitch just about the time we light out. They'll never suspect him of having anything to do with our going. He even arranges it so none of his ponies will be missing except the two he 'sacrificed' several sleeps before we got away. He's clever. He's setting his stage for a big effect. I must go around and see him."

He succeeded in seeing Sorrel Horse but was unable to speak with him privately. Warriors and women were standing thick about the medicine

The five year average from 1910 to 1914 was 1,012,000 bales and the average acre yield was 177 pounds. From 1915 to 1919 the average yield was 803,000 bales and the acreage yield was 154 pounds.

According to examinations made by school medical inspectors of New York state during 1922-23, 47 per cent of the children living in cities did before the sun vanished was to stand outside the lodge and stare toward the west and northwest. He waited and watched as long as it would be possible to behold a signal smoke against the sky. With a deep breath of relief he rejoined Dinsdale and remarked:

"They can't get a smoke tonight."

"But a messenger can ride in any moment," was the moody reply. "And his coming will be the signal for cutting our throats."

"I'm wakan witsasha. Nothing has happened yet. Wonder where Shunca-luta has been today. Haven't seen hide nor hair of him, and his lodge is closed tight. He must have left the village very early."

"He'll betray us. I'm sorry you told him what you did."

"He will not betray us. He'll return and say he's been back in the hills making new medicine, one that will break jugs without touching them," said Scissors.

"I think we're fools not to make a break tonight," mumbled Dinsdale.

"They have a strong night guard. We'd be run down in time. Shunca-luta has the right notion—strike off from the southern end of the butte and make Owl river. We must have guns and food."

Dinsdale's moral courage was slipping fast. Physical courage he had in abundance. Risks that he could discern and grapple with, even with the odds big against him, alarmed him not. But he had no defense against his imagination. He was entirely recovered from the hardships of the journey to the butte, but he was finding it difficult to sleep nights.

There was a new note in the morning's confusion. To the excited barking of dogs was added the shrill calls of children, telling their elders to come out and behold a new mystery.

The prisoners, ever fearing a disastrous turn in their affairs, crawled to the flap and looked out. A man wearing on his head the skin of an elk's head with horns attached, and an elk hide over his shoulders, was moving slowly between the lodges.

His hands and legs were painted yellow and in each hand he carried a hoop covered with elk hide and decorated with bergamot, an herb much liked by elks. Ahead of this grotesque figure walked two girls carrying a long-stemmed red sandstone pipe, decorated in the wakan fashion. As the masked man advanced he went through certain grotesque maneuvers that caused Dinsdale to open his eyes very wide.

"What the devil is it, and what is it trying to do?" he whispered.

"The pipe's a medicine pipe. It must be Shunca-luta. The head covering and hoop tell the people he has dreamed of an elk and has visited an Elk lodge in his sleep, and is now under the protection of their medicine. He's trying to act like an elk. See! He succeeded in seeing Sorrel Horse but was unable to speak with him privately. Warriors and women were standing thick about the medicine man's lodge. Crazy Horse strode through the group and after darting a glance at Sorrel Horse said to Scissors:

"They say Shunca-luta will break jugs without touching them."

"When?" asked Scissors.

Crazy Horse did not answer but looked inquiringly at Sorrel Horse. The medicine man confidently proclaimed:

"By the end of a few sleeps Shunca-luta will break jugs."

"Shunca-luta has been making a very strong medicine," Scissors politely said.

"He has been back in the hills where he made his heart humble by giving two of his best ponies to Taku Wakan. Then Taku Wakan talked to him men give an exhibition or not. But once he fell to contemplating the two Colts the idea fastened upon him.

He was always ready to learn better technique in the handling of firearms. Dwelling apart from the reservations he had missed seeing soldiers and officers at target practice, and his acquaintance with the white man's skill had been largely limited to skirmishes and battles when individual scores could not be followed.

Within thirty minutes after Scissors had spoken to his companion Little Big Man called at the lodge and suddenly announced the prisoners were to follow him.

On the slope leading to the river and the pony herd were gathered the men, women, children and most of the dogs. All were waiting with childhood eagerness to witness the white man's skill. Crazy Horse was seated apart from the assemblage and had the two revolvers on a robe before him. The chief asked:

"Does the young man wish to show the Ogala how to shoot?"

"He is ready to show them," Scissors answered.

"How does he want to shoot?" asked the chief. "He must shoot away from us."

Scissors repeated this query to Dinsdale.

"Tell him to have some of his men stand up the slope behind me and throw gourds and dishes down the slope and over my head. That will let me keep my back to the people."

Scissors repeated the suggestion to the chief. Crazy Horse readily agreed to it, and gave an order to the spectators.

The women ran back to the lodges to secure mugs, bowls and tin plates.

A dozen warriors with rifles were drawn up behind Dinsdale ready to shoot him down if he offered to face about before dropping the revolvers to the ground. Scissors explained all this, and Dinsdale curtly answered:

"I understand. But I want to look at the guns and see if they are all right before I commence."

Crazy Horse unloaded the weapons and took them to Dinsdale and watched him closely as he spun the cylinders and tested the trigger action.

"I am ready to load," he told Scissors.

He faced down the slope and reached a hand behind him for the cartridges. Crazy Horse handed these to Scissors and hurried back to his blanket. Scissors fed them into the outstretched hand and Dinsdale examined each critically before slipping it into a chamber.

At last he was ready and stood with the guns half-raised, his head tilted back so as to catch an early sight of the targets as they flew over his head.

through an elk dream. Tunkan's flying rocks have told him he shall break jugs."

Scissors turned away, pleased to know Sorrel Horse had burned his bridges behind him and must now complete his bargain for the white man's medicine. Crazy Horse followed behind Scissors and said:

"The young men do not come with a talk from High Wolf. Has Two Knives seen them in his dreams?"

"Has Tashunca-utie asked his medicine man about the scouts?"

"Shunca-luta has been dreaming of elks. He must paint his lodge before he can look in a dream for my young men."

"Two Knives Talking has seen in a dream two men riding north from the Short Medicine Pole hills as if looking for a soldier smoke. The dream men had no heads. Two Knives Talking could not see if they were old or young."

"They are ghosts. They have been killed," muttered Crazy Horse.

"Two Knives Talking believes the dream means they do not know just where to look for a smoke."

"They would never leave the hills to look for soldiers if High Wolf and his Cheyennes were in the hills."

Scissors shrugged his shoulders and replied:

"What is it to the white men where they ride? They are fed each day and have a good lodge to sleep in."

Crazy Horse glared wrathfully at the back of Scissors' head, and warned:

"If no talk comes from High Wolf at the end of three sleeps, and if Shunca-luta's new medicine says the white men are liars they will eat no more Ogala meat and berries."

"Shunca-luta's medicine will never tell the Ogala to skin the white men," calmly replied Scissors. "The white men went to Moto Tipi to find a trail to this village. Little Big Man surrounded us. We made no fight, for our medicine told us Little Big Man would bring us to Tashunca-utie. It is so. My white brother, Two Guns Shooting, could have killed many of them, for his gun medicine is very strong. But he did not hurt them."

Crazy Horse mused over the statement for some minutes. He said nothing until they were close to the prisoners' lodge. Then he spoke and Scissors turned to listen.

"Tashunca-utie has the young man's guns. Do they really say he can fire them better than Tashunca-utie?"

Scissors smiled as if amused at the query.

"Let the young man talk for himself through the guns," he suggested. "Two Knives Talking does not know fast and straight Tashunca-utie can shoot. He only knows about the white man. After my white brother has done his best then the mighty war chief can show him how a man should shoot."

Crazy Horse walked away, his head bowed. Scissors entered the lodge and told Dinsdale:

"I think there's a chance for you to show some gun play. The chief is curious to see what you can do. Too bad your nerves are shaken to pieces."

"Shaken to pieces?" snarled Dinsdale. "It's this waiting for something to happen that's troubling me. My shooting nerves are always steady."

"That's a good talk. I think you'll have a chance very soon. The chief understands revolvers and rifles, but he's never seen any fancy revolver shooting."

Dinsdale paced about the lodge, his body erect, his eyes glowing. To feel the guns in his hands once more would do him a world of good. Nor did Scissors err in estimating the extent of the chief's curiosity. Crazy Horse returned to his own lodge undecided whether to have the young man give an exhibition or not. But once he fell to contemplating the two Colts the idea fastened upon him.

He was always ready to learn better technique in the handling of firearms. Dwelling apart from the reservations he had missed seeing soldiers and officers at target practice, and his acquaintance with the white man's skill had been largely limited to skirmishes and battles when individual scores could not be followed.

"He is ready to show them," Scissors answered.

TALES OF DIXIE
LAND UNCOVERED

Early Origin of Name For Southland, Linked With New Orleans Bank

NEW ORLEANS, April 7.—The passing of a famous southern banking institution, through consolidation, has drawn attention again to the origin of the term "Dixie" as applied to the southland. The claim that the word came from the name of a man who once lived in New York seems to be set at rest by the records of this institution, the Citizens' Bank and Trust company, which has been merged after 91 years of continuous operation, with the Canal-Commercial Trust and Savings Bank.

Some authorities have attributed "Dixie" to the name of one Dixie, a large landholder and kind-hearted slave owner who resided on Manhattan Island during the latter part of the eighteenth century, but in New Orleans they take not stock in such a story and point to old chronicles of the Mississippi Valley, to disprove it.

In the thirties America was flooded with "wild-cat money" and counterfeiting was so common that suspicion became fixed on almost all paper money. Through it all, however, the bank notes of the Citizens' commanded the respect of the whole Mississippi Valley, as well, in the days before the Civil War the Citi-

LIMITED PARKING MAY SOLVE TRAFFIC JAMS

(By the Associated Press)

ALBANY, May 30.—Traffic experts of New York state have recommended the discontinuance of parking cars in congested districts as a relatively easy solution of the automobile problem. The immediate question confronting cities is to fit traffic to the streets, they declare. This can be done with little expense and little delay by proper control of parking. The ultimate problem is to fit the streets to traffic, which will cost much money.

"Everyone's prohibition of parking must come," the report of the experts says, "in view of the fact that traffic will continue to increase and that attempts to relieve congestion by parking time limitations, traffic diversion and other restrictions do not and can not satisfactorily and finally care for the interests of the public generally, the merchant and the automobile owner."

"Those who have studied the automobile traffic problem are agreed that streets are arteries of traffic and that moving vehicles should have preference over standing vehicles."

WOMAN THINKS SHE CAN'T TALK ENOUGH
"I had gall stones for 14 years and suffered severely from gas, colic and indigestion. Doctors wanted me to go to the hospital, but I took May's Wonderful Remedy instead, and am now feeling fine and better than I ever did. I can't talk enough about this remedy." It is a simple, harmless preparation that removes the catarrhal mucus from the intestinal tract and allays the inflammation which causes practically all stomach, liver and intestinal ailments, including appendicitis. One dose will convince or money refunded. Gwin & Mays and leading drug-gists everywhere.—Adv.

ELECTRIC STUDY SHOWS NEW LAWS

Scientific Research in Electronic Activities Make New Revelations

(By the Associated Press)

PASADENA, Cal., May 30.—Scientific research in electronic activity, conducted at the California Institute of Technology under the direction of Professor Robert A. Milliken, who was awarded the 1923 Nobel prize for physics, has resulted in two important discoveries, savants declare.

The first discovery, expected to clarify the Compton-Duane controversy, is that light energy travels in definite amounts and obeys the same laws that govern matter.

About a year ago Professor A. H. Compton advanced his theory that if it is free electrons, individual electrons torn out of parent atoms and roaming in space, that cause the scattering of X-rays. He predicted that the wave-length of the scattered quanta of X-rays, the smallest unit of X-ray that can take part in a reaction, would be determined by what they struck. Compton was successful in giving a physical demonstration of his theory in his own laboratory.

Then Professor William Duane of Harvard University, the pioneer investigator of X-rays in this country, announced after a long series of experiments, that he was unable to obtain the "Compton shift." Professor Compton went to Harvard and repeated his experiments without success, although he had no trouble at home. It was at this stage that the work at the California Institute of Technology was undertaken by Dr. J. A. Becker, national research fellow in physics, and his assistants.

Dr. Becker's experiments indicated that both Compton and Duane were right. He says that Duane probably failed to get the "Compton shift" because he used X-rays of too low an intensity. The Pasadena scientists were able to obtain both results on the same photographic plate.

"In further experiments," said Dr. Becker, "we hope to be able to tell more of the way which electrons are torn out of their parent atoms, how they roam about between the atoms before they are captured by another atom; and some of the rules of the game being played in nature between radiant energy and matter."

"One of the rules these experiments have confirmed is that radiant energy, light waves, does not travel in continuous streams, but that it goes along in minute bundles of energy called quanta and that when these quanta meet with resistance they act much the same as a tiny chunk of matter."

The second discovery, made by Dr. Russell M. Otis, national research fellow in physics, and his assistants, relates to penetrating radiations and promises to be of great value in solving some of the problems confronting wireless and radio communication. The import of this becomes apparent when it is realized that it is believed to be gamma rays, coming from radioactive substances, that interfere considerably with aerial communication.

The first step was to check the statement of Professor Kolhorster, the German scientist, that the penetrating radiations, or nature's X-rays grow more intensive at high altitudes. Extensive tests were made with the aid of an electroscope, an instrument for measuring radiations. Experiments made in an army plane by Dr. Otis at various altitudes up to 19,000 feet proved that the German scientist was correct, but did not disclose the source of the radiations.

Observations made on the summit of Mount Whitney, the highest peak in the continental United States resulted in the discovery that radioactivity did not come from the sun.

"We found," said Dr. Otis, "that radio-activity was just as strong at night, when the sun was directly under us, as it was in the daytime.

As the result of these observations this group of scientists have come to the conclusion that radio-active particles probably come from clouds of "star dust," heavenly wanderers that accompany the earth on its journey through space.

SULPHUR.—(Special)—An election has been called for June 24 to vote on the recall of Mayor R. L. Merrill, it was announced today when L. C. Winkler, legislative commissioner posted the notices here.

NO OUTSTANDING BOOKS OFFERED

Trend of Book Popularity Goes Back to Old Established Lines

There is no outstanding book among the most recent novels, that overshadows other such books in popular appeal. Such is the record of book sales in Ada in the past few months.

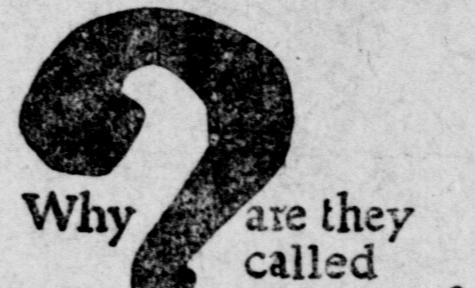

Since the period in which "Main Street," "If Winter Comes," and "Babbitt" followed each other in rapid succession of demand and showed a trend to realism in the reading matter of the public, no novel has appeared that has gripped the attention of the reading public to the exclusion of those based on the old romantic stories by the writers who have been known to the public for many years.

Within the past few months there have appeared a number of novels by the old reliable corps of authors, including Harry Leon Wilson, Kathleen Norris, Gene Stratton Porter, and Zane Grey. These have a steady demand that is carried over from the popularity of former productions of these writers.

There have also come from the press recently novels by new authors. Many of these are of exceptional merit, but readers have not yet become acquainted with the works of the latest novelists and they sell slowly.

Harry Leon Wilson's "Oh, Doctor" has been in considerable demand. The writer is the author of "Ruggles of Red Gap."

"Butterfly" by Kathleen Norris, proves the liking of the public for this writer.

HARDING MEMORIAL STAMPS MUCH SOUGHT BY COLLECTORS

(By the Associated Press)

WASHINGTON, May 30.—The Harding memorial postage stamp seems to be much in demand by stamp collectors throughout the country. The post office department has been compelled to enjoin postmasters from selling or furnishing precancel stamps of that and other issues to persons or concerns not authorized to use precancel stamps, the conditions governing the issue of which specifically provide they can be furnished by postmasters only after special authority in each instance has been obtained from the department.

Precanceled stamps are those furnished larger users of second, third, and fourth class mails bearing across their face the printed name of the postoffice where they must be used.

Each stamp is accounted for by the users and the mail, they carry does not have to be canceled by machine or by hand at the sending post office.

SUITS MADE BY HART SCHAFFNER & MARX

$25.00

Original values up to $45

That's a very unusual price for Hart Schaffner & Marx suits, and this is a very unusual offering, even in this store of extreme values.

We'll be perfectly frank about it.

This isn't our entire stock; it's a selected group of suits we are particularly anxious to sell—broken lots, with only one or two sizes of a pattern left; light colors and weights particularly appropriate for summer, but not so valuable next fall; some sport styles very good for summer, but not so good in the winter months.

There's a good selection in every size. If you want a good suit for work, for use in the car, for all around wear and want it mighty cheap, here's your chance. Thirty-eight suits won't go very far among the men of this community who would like to get a good utility suit for very little money.
